THE FRANK ADMISSIONS OF A POLITICAL OPPONENT.

The Houston (Texas) Daily Post keeps at the head of its editorial column in bold type the single word "FICK." It is the watch-word and shibboleth of its faith. The Post is a typical ultra-Southern Democratic paper, able, vigorous and thorough as a newspaper. June 15th the Post, in an article on the influence of the Republican party in Europe, spoke of the organization that sustain potencies on their thrones. And the absurd statement, absolutely offensive in the eyes of honest political students, was sent out soberly to Southern readers, and probably accepted by them as verity. The silly declamation was fortified by the equally foolish charge that the interests manifested by England in the preservation of the Union in the time of the rebellion, was due to the sympathy of that people for the Republican party, because the Post would have it inferred, it is representative of monarchical ideas. From England, says this same authority, came more than one inspiration that guided the "enemies of the South" in their endeavors to break down the statu quo." Evidence the Democratic Post regrets that the statu quo was broken down, and still views friends of the Union as "enemies of the South." It is scarcely necessary to recall the facts to the intelligent reader. England was not our friend in the rebellion. She was an obstacle in the path of the Union cause from the opening to the close of the rebellion. She furnished the rebels with ships and money and moral support. Her friendship for the United States was shallow, and only commercially discreet, and the English heart's highest hope was for the disruption of the Union, and the failure of republican forms of government, but the Post stated its premises, and from them drew the conclusion that the nominee of the then sitting Chicago Convention would be exceedingly acceptable to Europe. But the result disproved its prophecy. Mr. Blaine's nomination is not pleasing to Europe, since it signifies the probability of the establishment of an American policy, backed by a determination to make it felt and resisted.

On the 7th of June this Southern Democratic paper, having heard of the nomination of Mr. Blaine, immediately congratulated the Republican party because it "set the seal of integrity and patriotism on the administration of the President, whom Democrats had also learned to love and respect." It added, in a moment of frankness: "It is of no use to disguise the fact, Blaine is a very strong man, difficult to beat. He has the magnetism of the few select, who stand head and shoulders above their fellow-men; his private record is a pure one—the best of our knowledge, and his ability has been tested a hundred times and not been found wanting. The Democracy should not underrate their enemy. No use to make fun of Blaine's book. That book will turn out to be the most efficient document of the season, Blaine is the man of all men who will give the Democrats a hard battle for the Presidency."

GENERAL RUST was not supported by Sumner, Schurz, Ferry, Trumbull, Fenton, Curtis, Mathews, Bryant, Wells and others. They went over to Horace Greeley. But the Republican party did not die under the infliction. Blaine is a very strong man, difficult to beat. He has the magnetism of the few select, who stand head and shoulders above their fellow-men; his private record is a pure one—the best of our knowledge, and his ability has been tested a hundred times and not been found wanting. The Democracy should not underrate their enemy. No use to make fun of Blaine's book. That book will turn out to be the most efficient document of the season, Blaine is the man of all men who will give the Democrats a hard battle for the Presidency."

Egyptian troops at Berber have manually and gallantly maintained the reputation of the Egyptian soldier for courage and valor. Had they behaved with bravery the record of Mr. Blaine would entitle young Americans, who are anxious for the class of Republicans, to be found popular with the masses who are attracted by his personal magnetism, his undoubted ability and his rare eloquence. Blaine, it is said, was always a bitter partisan, a pupil of the "very worst class of Abolitionists," and a believer in Republican supremacy at any cost. But, forgetting its prophecy of European sympathy for the Republican party, it adds: "European sympathy will this time support the Democracy, because all Europe and South America to boot, is arrayed against the Maine statesman's vigorous foreign policy." But it says that Mr. Blaine's personal purity record is sealed, and that his temperance proclivities will array the whisky element against him and give it to the Democracy. According to its own showing, therefore this Southern Democratic journal admits that Mr. Blaine is the strongest Republican that could be chosen, is representative of America; its temperance and wise, was and is a Union lover, was and is an abolitionist, and therefore a lover of human freedom; is a man of lofty ability, a statesman and an acute politician; and does not command European sympathy because his ego post-hoc is distinctly American. The Post should be employed to continue the advocacy of Mr. Blaine's cause. It is too honest and outspoken to do the Democracy any good.

THE HIGH SCHOOL

There is considerable agitation in this city concerning proposed changes in the course of study in the High School of Sacramento. Any change that will benefit the greatest number of pupils in the public schools, and induce the largest attendance at the High School, should be adopted. Dr. Gardner said it was something that did not stand the test of law. He said many objections to the proposed changes were raised in the public schools, and he believed that the proposed changes were not ready to sanction any such ordinances.

Dr. Gardner said: "The changes that did not stand the test of law, I believe, were not so far as possible as possible to fit youths as fully as may be done for useful entry upon the active duties of life. The High School should be the opportunity for the child of the poor man, and we believe it has been thus far, and that the roster of the school will show it. Preparation for the University is but incidental to the High School. It never was one of its original purposes. It still should be retained as a possibility for all who desire to embrace it. That privilege should not be circumscribed so as to prevent pupils from entering the High School with a view to preparation for the University, but that should be left to the discretion of the parents.

Dr. Gillies thought that the objects sought to be attained by the proposed changes were not so far as possible as possible to fit youths as fully as may be done for useful entry upon the active duties of life. A GOOD COMPARISON.

The Rev. William Rennell, a well-known Methodist Clergyman, residing at Naples, Italy, has written a comparison of the effects of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a tincture.

"A ferret when placed at the entrance of a rat hole, enters the aperture, travels along the pipe, seizes the animal, devours it, and drives it out again, and so continues to do until it has devoured the animal, and can be admitted to infants without the slightest difficulty. The tincture, however, cures whooping cough at once, and for any cough of childhood or old age, and is equally efficacious in removing the permanent curse we are constantly in receipt of TESTIMONIALS, and RECOMMENDATIONS, PRECISELY PROVING THE EFFICACY OF THIS DELICIOUS SYRUP. IF YOUR CHILD HAS BEEN INFECTED WITH A CONTAGIOUS DISEASE, THIS REMEDY WILL PREVENT A CONTAGIOUS MALADY, FOR A HACKING NIGHT COUGH THIS REMEDY IS A GREAT BLESSING. Price, $1.00 per bottle, $5 for $5.00. DIRECTIONS IN TEN LANGUAGES ACCOMPANY EVERY BOTTLE."

The Rev. William Rennell, a well-known Methodist Clergyman, residing at Naples, Italy, has written a comparison of the effects of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a tincture.

"A ferret when placed at the entrance of a rat hole, enters the aperture, travels along the pipe, seizes the animal, devours it, and drives it out again, and so continues to do until it has devoured the animal, and can be admitted to infants without the slightest difficulty. The tincture, however, cures whooping cough at once, and for any cough of childhood or old age, and is equally efficacious in removing the permanent curse we are constantly in receipt of TESTIMONIALS, and RECOMMENDATIONS, PRECISELY PROVING THE EFFICACY OF THIS DELICIOUS SYRUP. IF YOUR CHILD HAS BEEN INFECTED WITH A CONTAGIOUS DISEASE, THIS REMEDY WILL PREVENT A CONTAGIOUS MALADY, FOR A HACKING NIGHT COUGH THIS REMEDY IS A GREAT BLESSING. Price, $1.00 per bottle, $5 for $5.00. DIRECTIONS IN TEN LANGUAGES ACCOMPANY EVERY BOTTLE."
